SHIRKING.

's Harder Work Than the Actual

"Did you ever notice how hard some men work to keep from working?" said a man who keeps tab on things of a curious kind to a writer for the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "If you haven't you have missed something that will entertain you for awhile when you have nothing else to do. Take the man who shirks his work, and as a rule you will find that the act of dodging what he could do will vastly increase the amount of work which he is forced to do. The man who shirks never has a smooth way of it. Things which he had hoped would redound to his good he finds to be really to his disadvantage. Instead of shirking decreasing the amount of work which the shirker must perform it increases the work. Besides the man is robbed of that mental satisfaction which comes of duty well and faithfully done. You take the common beggar and the tramp as examples. Mind you, I am speaking of the real beggar, and the real tramp, the 'professionals,' as they are called, who develop into mendicants. I have often wondered if these fellows ever took the time to figure out how much less energy they could expend on the little things and little comforts they get, if they would go about it in a different way. Of course, many of the beggars and tramps roaming over the country belong to the hardened criminal class, and they are simply out to loot in whatever way they can do it. But I was thinking more particularly of the man belonging to the honest class, and not of crooks. Shirking doesn't pay. It is a bad business, and to use an old saying, 'costs more than it comes to.' Yes, indeed. This thing of working just to keep from working is about the hardest work a man can do. I have known not a few instances of men who would burn up five dollars' worth of muscular energy, and time, in an effort to get five cents for 'nothing,' as they were pleased to think, and it never once occurred to them that instead of gaining five cents they had actually lost $4.95."

PICTURES WITHOUT PENCIL.

Hot Poker Experiment the Beginning of Art of Pyrography.

About a century ago an artist named Cranch was standing one day in front of a fire in his home at Axminster. Over the fireplace was an oaken mantelpiece, and it occurred to Cranch that this expanse of wood might be improved by a little ornamentation. He picked up the poker, heated it red hot and began to sketch in a bold design, says London Answers.

The result pleased him so much that he elaborated his work and began to attempt other fire pictures on panels of wood. These met with a ready sale, and Cranch soon gave all his time to his new art. This was the beginning of what is now known as pyrography. The poker artist of to-day uses many different shaped tools and has a special furnace in which they are kept heated. The art has been elaborated greatly. The knots, curls and fibers of the wood are often worked into the design and delicate tinting produced by seorching the panel.

There are many strange methods in vogue of producing pictures without the direct use of pencil or brush. Some years ago a certain Mr. Straker attracted great attention by his swelled wood pictures. His method depended on the fact that wood swells when wetted, and shrinks again when dry, and that wood fibers when pressed down dry rise permanently to their former level if wetted.

Walked Around the World.

There are now in Milan an Irish Canadian and his wife, named O'Malley, though the lady is Dutch by birth, who between 1897 and 1902 claim to have walked round the world, covering on foot a distance of 31,200 miles without any resources other than such as they could obtain as they journeyed. They produce no fewer than 27 volumes of documents attesting their wanderings. At present they are organizing in Milan a series of lectures, which they hope may yield money enough to carry them back to Canada.

BURNS.

Many Are Fatal Which Need Not Be
If Properly Treated.

The ill effects sustained from a burn vary in accordance with the extent of the area involved, and according to its location. Surgeons have come to regard a burn of the skin's surface as usually fatal when its extent is greater than a tenth of the body surface. The severest burns usually originate from scalding by steam, from explosions, and particularly, says the Youth's Companion, from clothing which has caught fire. The common use of gasoline, naphtha and benzine for cleaning purposes, all of which are highly inflammable, and the vapor from which is explosive, makes a severe burn from them common.

No accident demands more prompt intervention, if one would limit its severity, than a burn of any kind. The skin is able to endure momentarily the direct application of heat of a degree very much above what might be termed destructive heat because of the moisture of the epidermis, which covers the true skin more or less thickly; most thickly of course on the palms of the hands and soles of the feet. As soon as all moisture is completely evaporated, a high degree of heat causes the destructive process to begin.

Wherever possible a burned surface should be immediately plunged into water, preferably cold. Water is an excellent conductor of heat, and is most generally available. After the lapse of but a few seconds from the time of burning such a remedy will have lost its virtue. One instinctively applies this remedy when on scorching his finger he immediately lays it on the tongue. The depth of the burn is thus greatly lessened, and destruction of the entire thickness of the skin is prevented.

So many severe burns have their origin from the kitchen grate, alongside which there is ordinarily a running water-tap, that it seems strange the latter is not more frequently utilized. A flimsy cotton garment, for example, which catches fire is extinguished by water with much less damage to the wearer than by smothering the flames by woolen fabrics. This is especially apt to be the case if there is no woolen underwear to protect the skin.

The prevention of severe burns, as in the case of other accidents, often lies in one's having thought out beforehand what would best be done in case the need for immediate action should occur.

On the occurrence of a severe burn every precaution should be taken to prevent the disturbance of the burned area from further harm from rubbing or from stripping off the blistered skin. No raw surface must be made if that can possibly be prevented. Clothing should be cut away quickly but cautiously. Pain is less severe if the wound is protected from the air.

The most common remedy is the use of some unirritating oily preparation. A mixture of equal parts of olive-oil and lime-water is a good remedy, or a thick layer of powdered starch. Pulverized boric acid may serve even better as a means for preventing disturbance of the burned area and infection from the floating organisms of the air.

Fewer Carpets Used.

Even in the houses of the poor in New York city the carpet—that is the kind tacked to the floor—is rapidly being supplanted by the cleaner and more artistic rug. Since the settlement workers have become active over on the East side all kinds of reforms calculated to exterminate germ life have been instituted. Painted walls are preferred for this reason over cheap wall paper, because they do not hold dust and germ life. In all the big office buildings carpets have been entirely discarded for the polished hardwood floor.

Cycling Backwards.

A remarkable cycling feat has been accomplished by Henry Metcalfe, of Stretford, who rode backwards from St. Ann's square, Manchester, to Chester, a distance of 39½ miles, in 3 hours and 40 minutes, without leaving his machine.

Do Good—It Pays.

A Chicago man has observed that "Good deeds are better than real estate deeds—some of the latter are worthless. Act kindly and gently, show sympathy and lend a helping hand. You cannot possibly lose by it." Most men appreciate a kind word and encouragement more than substantial help. There are persons in this community who can truthfully say: "My good friend, cheer up. A few doses of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy will rid you of your cold, and there is no danger whatever from pneumonia when you use that medicine. It always cures. I know it for it has helped me out many a time." Sold by C. K. Wyly, druggist.

From Across the Rio Grande.

Mr. G. A. Fisher, of Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, Mexico, is employed in the engineer's office of the Mexican International Railroad. On Sept. 7, 1902, he wrote: "I am recommending Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to all my friends in this community and others that wish an invaluable remedy for dyspepsia and constipation." Druggists sell this valuable laxative and stomach remedy. If yours does not, send his name to Syrup Pepsin Co., Monticello, Ill., and they will send you a sample bottle and interesting book.

More Threats Made.

More threats have been made against the police officials of Helena, Mont., by the band of dynamiters operating for some time, and the force of guards about the jail has been increased.

He Learned a Great Truth.

It is said of John Wesley that he once said to Mistress Wesley: "Why do you tell that child the same thing over and over again?" "John Wesley, because once telling is not enough." It is for this same reason that you are told again and again that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds and grip; that it counteracts any tendency of these diseases to result in pneumonia, and that it is pleasant and safe to take. For sale by C. W. Wyly, druggist.
